Welcome to Richmond and Wayne County, a community that celebrates passion in all its forms.

At the heart of every getaway is passion – for a new place, a new experience, even a new way of expressing yourself. It’s about experiencing those moments that leave you feeling enriched and renewed, creating special memories.

Creative arts are represented with original exhibits throughout Wayne County. The self-guided murals trail directs you to a series of vibrant panoramas that adorn area businesses, many telling the story of our past. The internationally recognized Overbeck Pottery was lovingly crafted in Cambridge City from 1911-1955 and is on display at the Museum of Overbeck Art Pottery.

Wayne County is known as the Crossroads of American History with its bountiful history that helped shape America. At the Levi Coffin House, known as the Grand Central Station of the Underground Railroad, you’ll learn how nearly 2,000 fugitive slaves were protected and ushered north toward freedom. In recent years, the Coffin House was ranked by the History Channel as one of the nation’s Top 25 Most Historic Sites.

The Historic National Road, which linked the eastern seashore with the western frontier in the 1830s, passes through the heart of the county offering a glimpse into our nation’s past. One artifact of the road would be the small town of Centerville, known as the “City of Arches” for its rare, early 19th century Federal-style brick rowhouses with archways. Found at the Wayne County Historical Museum are other storied artifacts such as an authentic Conestoga wagon pioneers used as they trekked westward on the National Road.

With an established and well-earned reputation as one of the best Midwest antiquing destinations, Antique Alley offers 1,200+ antique dealers along two loop trails. Historic Cambridge City is the hub of Antique Alley with thirteen antique shops/malls within a 3 block area. Boutiques and unique shops add to Wayne County’s appeal and provide endless shopping pleasures. Warm Glow Candle Company produces hand-dipped, made in Centerville, candles that come in 65 different fragrances and in a variety of sizes. Richmond’s Historic Depot District and downtown Richmond are booming with new eateries and trendy shops. Be sure to check out Veach’s Toy Station, a Richmond icon since 1937.

Wayne County has many outdoor recreation activities. Hiking is available at Cope Environmental Center and Hayes Arboretum. The fragrant All-America Rose Display Garden is a must see.

Don’t be fooled by our laid-back lifestyle; we take dining seriously. We are quickly becoming known as a “foodie” destination. We also have a fantastic wine and beer scene. If chocolate is your pleasure, you’ll want to indulge in the FREE Wayne County Chocolate Trail.

Unwind and rejuvenate in the comfort of one of our affordable accommodations…charming B & Bs, hotels/motels with all the comforts of home, and spacious campgrounds. Then, wake up to yet another day of exploring the possibilities of Wayne County.
Antiques

Some things just get better with age! If your kind of shopping includes vintage finds, antique furniture, or items to upcycle, you won’t be disappointed in the multitude of antique shops and malls in our region.

Indiana’s Antique Alley has made an exceptional name for itself in the world of antiques. With more than 1,200 dealers along two interlocking loop trails, Antique Alley has become the premier, year-round antiques destination in Indiana.

The trails leisurely ramble through historic and scenic eastern Indiana and western Ohio to a variety of both small and large antique shops and malls offering a plethora of affordable treasures from the past. Historic Cambridge City serves as the hub of Antique Alley boasting 13 eclectic antique shops and malls within a 3-block area.

The Antique Alley brochures are organized by town allowing visitors to jump on anywhere in eastern Indiana or western Ohio to begin exploring.

It’s difficult to say whether the best part of treasure hunting along the Antique Alley trails is the vast variety of time-honored wares that fills an individual niche, or the people you meet as you visit the shops. Many of the owners and proprietors have deep roots in the region. These are people who have a love for their community and are happy to share that love with those they meet.

It’s time to plan your antique adventure getaway!

Wayne County offers visitors a look into the past, a past that is steeped in a rich history. Follow footsteps to freedom at the Levi Coffin House, the Grand Central Station of the Underground Railroad, where nearly 2,000 slaves were ushered to freedom. Marvel at early 19th century architecture. Stare down a mastodon or take a stroll through one of the area’s beautiful historic districts.

Richmond hosts Indiana’s two mummies: one at the Joseph Moore Museum of Natural History, a hands-on children’s museum with exhibits that engage the mind, and the other is at the Wayne County Historical Museum where you’ll find a 3,000 year old mummy with his beautifully preserved coffin. Also numerous cases filled with Egyptian artifacts that were used in every day life are on display there.

Car buffs will enjoy the Model T Museum which chronicles the famous Tin Lizzy spanning from 1908 to 1927. The Wayne County Historical Museum boasts a superb collection of early Richmond-made automobiles.

Attractions in Richmond/Wayne County are very affordable with many of the attractions offering free or minimal admission cost. So get going to create a special memory during your visit by weaving some history and fun into your trip.
Huddleston Farm House Inn Museum/National Road Interpretive Center

Owned and restored by Indiana Landmarks, the museum operates as the National Road Heritage Site, where exhibits offer modern-day travelers a vivid picture of cross-country travel on the Historic National Road from Cumberland, Maryland to Vandalia, Illinois – from the pioneer era to the present. The new exhibits allow visitors to hear from a covered wagon traveler about the conditions on the road, the food they ate, and where they found lodging. Visitors will experience the road surfaces over time, from a bumpy mud track dotted with tree stumps to brick, concrete, and the current asphalt. Children can try the straw-filled mattress like the ones pioneers used on the floor of the travelers’ kitchens. At an interactive wall-sized map, visitors can click on places from Maryland to Illinois to learn more about sites to visit on the National Road today. A simulation allows tourists to drive along the road viewing important National Road landmarks, including those lost, saved and endangered.

838 National Rd., (765) 478-3172, indianalandmarks.org/HistoricSites ToursEvents/HuddlestonHouse. Open (Fridays, April thru October): 1 p.m. and 2 p.m., and by appointment.

Overbeck House and Pottery Studio

In 1911, the six Overbeck sisters began designing, experimenting with, and crafting original pottery and prints in their Cambridge City home. As the years went on, deaths took their toll on the family, until one sister remained. She continued making pottery until 1955. The Overbeck House and Pottery Studio honors this family’s 44 year legacy of good, hand-crafted, beautiful art that is so important to Indiana’s history. A coal-oil kiln for firing pottery is in the house. More pottery is on display at the Overbeck Museum in the Cambridge City Library. Donations accepted.

520 E. Church St., (765) 478-5993, waynet.org/nonprofit/overbeck.htm. Open by appointment only.

CENTREVILLE

1840 Mansion House Inn & Salisbury Courthouse

This pioneer era inn served as the office for the Western Stage Company where stagecoaches changed horses. It was also the site of one of the first women’s temperance crusades in 1858. Centerville women learned the barkeep was serving liquor to local schoolboys. On June 30, 1858, several women stormed the bar armed with axes, and smashed several whiskey barrels. Most of the women ended up in jail overnight. The 1811 courthouse is the oldest existing log courthouse in the Northwest Territory.

214 E. Main St., (765) 855-2241. Tours are available by appointment.

Historic Centerville

Selected as a top small-town getaway by Midwest Living Magazine editors, Centerville is a town that time forgot, offering a charming atmosphere and intriguing antique and specialty shops. Centerville was an important stop along the National Road in the 19th century. As many as 200 wagons a day passed through Centerville providing livelihood to the inns, wagon shops, saddle shops, and tanneries. It still depicts the look of yesteryear with early 19th century row houses with unique bricked archways.

LEVI & CATHARINE COFFIN HOUSE STATE HISTORIC SITE
(GRAND CENTRAL STATION OF THE UNDERGROUND RAILROAD)
A part of the legendary Underground Railroad for fleeing slaves of pre-Civil War days, this registered National Historic Landmark is a Federal style brick home built in 1839. Hundreds of fugitive slaves were ushered to freedom through the Coffin House. The History Channel has listed the Levi Coffin House as one of the top 25 most historic sites in the United States. In 1826, the young married Quaker couple left their home in Guilford County, North Carolina vowing to devote their lives to helping slaves reach Canada where freedom was guaranteed. The 30 or so families who settled here ahead of them had come for the same reasons. However, few of the settlers were taking an active role in helping fugitives. This work was being done by freed slaves who were living there. They lacked connections and had limited knowledge of geography, and as a result many of the fleeing slaves were recaptured. The freed slaves themselves were in constant danger of being seized and resold into bondage. The Coffins decided to risk their property and future to act upon their opposition to slavery. They felt it was a moral issue which far outweighed Federal laws. Opening December 2016, is the multi-million dollar interpretive center which will provide an enriched visitor experience by bringing the Underground Railroad journey to life.

Starr Historic District
The Starr District, listed on the National Register, was developed from farmland bought by Charles and Elizabeth Starr from Jeremiah Cox, a Richmond founder. The land was subdivided into lots in the early 1850s and sold for residential construction. The homes reflect the early, middle, and late Victorian periods of architectural styles, as well as additions of early 20th century homes. This neighborhood was the home of many of Richmond's business and industrial leaders and is an excellent example of the life and times of that era. The district is cited as having national significance because of its number of historic homes and the people who lived here. Walking Tours: Brochure available at Old National Road Welcome Center. North 10th St. area, (765) 935-8687.

Richmond Group Art Colony
(Plein-Air Artists)
Richmond/Wayne County was an important center for art in the Midwest during the 19th century. There is a swift movement to bring to light the early works of the Richmond Group Art Colony. Prominence wasn’t something they sought due to their Quaker roots. The Richmond Group Art Colony included artists such as John Elwood Bundy, William Alden Mote, Maude Kaufman Eggemeyer, J. Edgar Forkner, and many more. These talented individuals were primarily self-taught, plein-air artists. Their paintings depicted eastern Indiana’s beautiful landscapes and vibrant settings.

Today, the Richmond Art Museum celebrates Wayne County’s colorful heritage by hosting plein-air events each year. Observe art unfold before your eyes when artists set up their easels in and around Richmond to capture the beauty of eastern Indiana. This is a unique opportunity for serious art collectors, casual art enthusiasts, tourists and residents to buy original art fresh off the easel.

Love the outdoors? You’ll find plenty of room to play and reconnect with family in the greater Richmond area.

Hunt for ancient fossils along creek beds, throw some disc golf, paddle along in a canoe, stroll through public rose gardens or search for caches. Skateboarders and in-line skating enthusiasts can practice their moves at the Glen Miller skatepark. Rent a bike and ride for miles on the Cardinal Greenway, Indiana’s longest paved rails-to-trails bike path, or test your mountain biking skills at Hayes Arboretum, voted one of Indiana’s best mountain biking sites.

Nature aficionados will enjoy bird-watching, including eagles, or an energizing hike along scenic trails. Visit Indiana’s Highest Point, then take in the beauty of Thistlethwaite Falls. Putt around Wayne County’s golf courses, gather together friends and family for a high-spirited paintball quest or visit historic McBride stadium to cheer on the Richmond Jazz baseball team, a summer collegiate league.

The winter months offer plenty of options from invigorating cross-country skiing to fun-filled snow tubing and sledding. You can rent snowshoes at Hayes Arboretum and trek through the snow taking in the beauty of a winter wonderland.

Hike it, bike it, ski, paddle, or ride it! You’ll love the fresh air and beauty of Wayne County!

Vintners and brewers add spirited local flavor to the Richmond area palate.

Eastern Indiana’s & western Ohio’s wineries and microbreweries offer a unique, relaxing getaway with more than a dozen craft wineries and microbreweries waiting to share their bounty with visitors from near and far.

Richmond knows beer. You could even say it’s part of our DNA. After all, Richmond is the historic birthplace of Indiana’s oldest brewery. Two breweries functioned at Indiana’s Statehood in 1816. Ezra Boswell, a one-eyed Quaker, started a commercial brewery here in 1816 and named it Boswell Brewery and continued the brewery until his death in 1831. Almost a century later, on St. Patrick’s Day, 2010, a Richmond couple launched New Boswell Brewing Company and Taproom commemorating Ezra Boswell.

It all started with a couple of wineries, then more wineries and a couple of breweries, now it has become a destination for tastefully engineered wine and ale where you’ll find an excellent variation of tastes.

We offer you plenty of reasons to plan a wine/beer tour with an overnight stay in Richmond/Wayne County! The newly released Heartland Wine & Ale Trail provides a pathway of enjoying local wineries and breweries while exploring the region.
BROOKVILLE
Legacy Lane Vineyard
Legacy Lane Vineyard is a farm winery. We grow and cultivate chambourcin and traminette grapes on our farm which are used in making three of our signature wines. 12330 Whitcomb Rd., (937-902-7738). Call for hours.

NEW MADISON, OH
Kennedy Vineyard
Kennedy Vineyard is a family owned and operated winery with a vineyard nestled on a 10 acre farm. Our tasting room is a warm and friendly atmosphere and is open from 11am to 6pm. We offer a variety of award-winning wines from our vineyard as well as a menu of flatbreads, soups, and meat and cheese trays. A warm welcome to all to share in our love of wine, friends, and family!

ARCANUM, OH
A.R. Winery
Ten wines are always flowing at this country winery. The wine is made from whole fruits, rather than juices, and is triple filtered, resulting in a rich, fruity flavor with more subtle sweetness and smooth finish. Their unique wine blends combine artistry with cutting edge science. 3564 Gordon Landis Rd., (937) 417-0565, arwinery.com. Open Fri. 6-9 p.m.; Sat. 3-9 p.m.

Visit regional wineries and breweries for a look into the creative process paired with tastings of expertly crafted beverages.

Each winery in the region has its own distinct appeal and are thriving on their successful creations. Enjoy a little vino with your friends and family for a unique local experience.

The craft beer culture is growing quickly in the greater Richmond area. There is nothing quite like tasting a new brew in the very place it was made and meeting the very people who crafted it. Many local restaurants and bars serve regional beers on tap. You just might find a new favorite.

Many wineries and breweries incorporate Indiana and Ohio's agricultural products such as wheat, honey and fruit, along with other indigenous ingredients into their beverages. Each is passionate about their craft, bringing their unique perspective to an ever-expanding variety of flavors and styles.

We invite you to sip, sample and taste your way through eastern Indiana and western Ohio on the Heartland Wine & Ale Trail. Each one is distinct and special in its own way!
