Welcome to Richmond-Wayne County, Indiana, where you’ll experience an incredible community spirit. We’re full of passionate locals who are proud to call this area “home,” and who want to share their stories—and county—with you.

It’s here you’ll walk the same historic neighborhoods where recording stars like Hoagy Carmichael and Louis Armstrong spent time between recording sessions at the former Gennett Recording Studio. You’ll see and experience art in a way that’s only found in Wayne County—from more than 80 larger-than-life murals, to a world-class art museum. You’ll visit artisans and watch them create beautiful works of art, including many that are sold worldwide. You’ll experience first-hand what’s been called the “Grand Central Station of the Underground Railroad” where nearly 2,000 fugitive slaves were protected and ushered north to freedom.

You’ll spend days exploring our famous Antique Alley. A destination unto itself, this trail rambles through historic and scenic towns with a variety of small and large antique shops and malls, offering more than 1,200 antique dealers along two loop trails. More great shopping awaits you at our boutiques and specialty shops.

Foodies will love our culinary scene—from quaint coffee shops in historically-preserved buildings, to acclaimed fine dining in a grand old home. There’s renowned BBQ in a pre-Civil War firehouse, and a homemade ice cream parlor that was featured on national television. From international flavors to Indiana’s second oldest continuously-running tavern, it’s easy to eat and drink your way through Wayne County.

There’s an environmental passion in Wayne County, and you’ll see it just about everywhere you look. In fact, the sustainable Cope Environmental Center was built to meet the “Living Building Challenge,” a certification program so stringent in its requirements that only a few buildings around the world have qualified for the highest level. Our 466-acre arboretum has ponds, fields, and wetlands with 16 miles of hiking and biking trails and educational opportunities—all free to the public. A big part of the Cardinal Greenway, Indiana’s longest rail-to-trail covering 62 miles, runs through Wayne County, and is a big draw for hikers and bikers.

Come for a visit and let us show you why we are proud to call Wayne County “home.”
She was wandering through the antique store when she was stopped short by a neon Margaritaville sign.

“Perfect,” she said to herself, her Margaritaville-crazed son in mind. She snapped a cell phone photo, not quite ready to buy. A couple months went by. She’d looked at that photo dozens of times; finally, she called the antique store. It still had one sign. Her son found it under his Christmas tree.

That’s how it goes sometimes along eastern Indiana’s Antique Alley. More often than not, however, it’s an instant purchase. Something the buyer had always wanted—or didn’t know he wanted until he saw it.
Unleash your design inspiration as you embark on a treasure hunt with your closest friends. Antique Alley is a hotbed of vintage finds and is one of Indiana’s most diverse antique destinations. Two different trails will guide you to more than 1,200 antique dealers offering a plethora of fun finds. Don’t miss historic Cambridge City, the hub of Antique Alley, with more than ten distinctive shops and malls within a two-block area. Plan an overnight stay, because just one day isn’t enough to uncover all the hidden treasures.

The antique stores here pair knowledgeable dealers with a passion for their profession. Today’s shops are bright, clean and spacious with items displayed in charming vignettes. Some pieces sell for hundreds—even thousands—of dollars, others for just a couple bucks.

While some antique stores own the merchandise, many offer space to individual vendors who set up their own displays and decide prices. The store provides the location and takes care of shoppers. Some stores do both.

Beth Leisure has been in Cambridge City for 20 years. “I have something for everyone,” she says, because “almost everybody collects something.”

“People coming from near and far don’t even believe our prices,” Leisure says.

Antique Alley sells to not only individual shoppers but also to dealers, who come with huge trucks and fill them. Doug Price of High Hats Antique Mall says dealers call eastern Indiana their “honey pot.”

Cambridge City’s Building 125 is actually four separate and spacious buildings open from one to another inside. It’s got both antiques and reproductions in furniture, primitives, and quilts, plus small items that include note cards, linens, and candles.

“I just want to attract a little bit of everybody,” says owner Norma Bertsch.

Wheeler’s Antiques in Centerville started the local antique craze in 1970. “My husband and I both liked antiques and the house got too full, so it was time to open shop,” says owner Sue Wheeler. A widow, she now shares the business with her son, Scott. “We like to find something unusual, something you don’t see just everywhere. I tried to pare down but I love finding and I love buying.”
Gather the girls for a relaxing girlfriend getaway. You deserve it! Treat yourself to a decadent weekend of divine chocolate, savory wine, boutique shoppes, visual arts, specialty coffee, and cozy dining options. Plus, each lady receives a perk pack full of surprises. So, what are you waiting for?

The business has always had two buildings across the street from one another. Sue Wheeler handles the shop with glassware, paintings, and other more delicate items. Bigger items that include toys, signs, and furniture are in the other building, which Scott Wheeler runs. “My dad’s theory was that if one side of the street burned down, we’d still open up the next day,” he says.

The Centerville Antique Mall, is the largest facility along Antique Alley. It offers merchandise from many vendors ranging from small jewelry pieces to huge tractors.

Just across the state line in the quaint village of New Paris, Ohio, the New Paris Antique Mall offers four floors of unique antiques and collectibles, all under one roof. Yes, antiques are big here. But there’s more.

Boutique shopping beckons at Luxe Lizzies, a retail space in the Loft in Richmond’s Depot District. Luxe Lizzies offers clothing and accessories with a young-ish vibe.

Chic but comfortable clothing that is “unique and different” is at The Secret Ingredient in downtown Richmond. “There’s always something that we hope will make you smile,” owner Jeanne Rush says. Prices

Sue and Scott Wheeler, Owners

Fifty years ago, Sue was looking for the perfect town to open an antique store—something with a small town atmosphere, but with easy access off Interstate 70 and U.S. 40. She found exactly that in Centerville, with its historic charm and ideal location, and opened Wheeler’s Antiques which is still going strong. She’s been joined by her son, Scott, who’s involved in every aspect of the family business. Both Sue and Scott enjoy chatting with visitors from all over the world. They’ve sold items to Disneyland Paris and some of their famous visitors include actor Jonathan Winters and Ken Kercheval, among others.

Q&A

What do you think makes Wayne County so special?
The antique shops are accessible, the community is safe and inviting, and everybody is friendly.

What do you think Wayne County’s biggest draws are for tourists?
People can spend multiple days in the area and take in at least 30 antique shops and malls. It’s a perfect place to go antiquing.

What is your favorite way to spend a day off?
Attending the Richmond Civic Theatre productions, Richmond Art Museum, and pursuing local auctions. Also taking our favorite drive in Wayne County, which is Centerville Road south to the small town of Abington where we enjoy the rolling hills and the beautiful countryside.
WARM GLOW CANDLE CO.

Alan & Jackie Carberry created Warm Glow Candle Company in the basement of their Richmond home in 1994. Little did they know, the product they crafted would one day be shipped worldwide. Today, the lumpy, bumpy candles are handmade in a Centerville facility where workers make up to 5,000 candles daily in 60+ fragrances and a variety of sizes. This delightful destination, just off I-70, offers 22,000-square-feet of pure shopping pleasure with an array of Warm Glow candles, home décor, and other temptations.

vary because “we go after a look, not a price.”

Down the street is O’Onda Gallery & Gifts, offering international fair trade/local artisans/products representing special causes. “Where you purchase with purpose,” owner Melinda Wilson says. After several visits to Mozambique, she named her shop O’Ona, Portuguese for wave. “With everything you purchase here, it’s like the ripples of a wave,” she says. “You’re touching lives. You’re supporting the artists, and their communities, ...”

Downtown Richmond is also home to Esmond’s Shoes, owned and operated by the same local family since 1950. They pride themselves in not only offering a great variety of quality footwear, but also in providing real, honest in-store service to their customers.

Ply Fiber Arts offers classes and supplies for knitting, crocheting, and weaving. Its 2018 move to a larger building provided space for workshops; pottery wheels are available. The former yarn shop became Spoke Easy Bike Shop.

The Warm Glow Candle outlet on I-70 is a must for not only candles—they still make their signature “lumpy, bumpy handmade candles”—but also home accent pieces.

Fountain Acres Amish Market on U.S. 27 (the Quaker Trace) offers food samples aplenty—local produce, freshly baked goods, bulk foods—as well as outdoor furniture. Shoppers rave about their deli sandwiches, which they often enjoy at the picnic tables outdoors.

Besides antiques, Centerville is also home to The Village Forager where you can shop for unique gift items, home décor, and more while sipping on your favorite hot beverage at the coffee bar.

Spring through autumn in Wayne County means shopping local at strawberry and honey farms, orchards, farmers markets, flower farms, pumpkin patches, and farm stores. Be sure to take home some of the best, farm-fresh products you’ll find in Indiana.

So shoppers, start your search.

Art is big here. Huge, even. Sometimes two or three stories tall and visible from blocks away.

More than 80 towering illustrations chronicle Wayne County’s history, all done as murals, and celebrated on the Murals’ Trail. Among the muralists is Pamela Bliss, who not only painted numerous murals in Wayne County and other Indiana spots, but also created a competition which brought additional art to Wayne County. “Not everyone goes to an art museum,” she says. “This is something the common person sees every day. It’s larger than life so it pulls you in.”
Two murals offer a striking example conveying the region's ties to the Underground Railroad. In Fountain City, the story unfolds at the Levi & Catharine Coffin State Historic Site. Here is the 1839 Coffin house with its hiding room, cellar well, and wagon with hidden compartment, all used by the Coffins in helping more than 2,000 freedom seekers escape slavery. Other murals commemorate Richmond's recording heritage with Hoagy Carmichael, Louis Armstrong, Bix Beiderbecke and more.

Remnants of the Starr-Gennett buildings and its place in history as the cradle of recorded jazz, country, gospel, and blues are in Whitewater Gorge Park. So too is the musicians' Walk of Fame.

Another piece of public art is the Madonna of the Trail in Glen Miller Park in Richmond. It's along the National Road (U.S. 40), America's first highway. In the 1830s, more than 200 wagons passed through every day, heading west. Some stayed, making Wayne County the most populous county in Indiana for a while.

Families going westward first went through Richmond, and then through Centerville where because of economic success, led to the narrowing of the roads that allowed residents to build additional rooms onto the front of their homes. Archways were erected between the brick rowhouses to give access to the rear of the buildings. Five of the original nine still exist.

Visitors to Centerville often stop at Scott Shafer's studio to watch him create functional pieces of stoneware, from large decorative bowls and vases to everyday plates and mugs, on his potter's wheel. “I try to make it real and honest,” Shafer says. “I like every aspect of the process, from mixing the clay to selling the pots.”

for more than 40 years. Many of the pieces are small, whimsical figurines. The value of the pottery has increased dramatically in recent decades. Librarian Dale Scott says, “They gave a lot away. One piece here was bought at a garage sale for $5—now worth $40,000.”

Overbeck pieces are also at the Richmond Art Museum. The focus of the museum is on American art, particularly Hoosier. “In the early 1900s Richmond, Indiana had a group of artists whose interest in fostering art in their community made an authentic contribution to the history of art in America. Richmond became an important center for art, a place that nourished and inspired artists,” says director Shaun Dingwerth.

More recent galleries and an outdoor sculpture park are on the campuses of Earlham College and Indiana University East. Nearby, Bill and Jeanne Magaw, known as The Magaws of Boston (Indiana), have been creating contemporary kinetic sculptures in their country studio since 1970. Many brightly colored pieces have involved water; others are powered by wind. Other shops

Shaun Dingwerth, Executive Director
It’s no surprise Shaun has been running this impactful and eye-opening museum since 2004. His relatives were among the first settlers in the area and contributed to both the art movement and the development of Richmond. He’s the author of the book, The Richmond Group Artists, which Shaun says is “the fruition of a longtime passion that began when, as a teenager, I watched with amazement the interest in the artwork of the Richmond Group art colony at local and regional auctions.”

Q&A
What do you think makes Wayne County so special?
Our incredible history which affords unique opportunities for visitors to visit quality museums, green spaces, waterways and the environs around the county.

What do you think Wayne County’s biggest draws are for tourists?
There is so much to see and do in Wayne County. Plenty of small businesses who offer unique experiences.

What is your favorite way to spend a day off?
I enjoy driving the roads of Wayne County—especially along Boundary Road—and visiting the area’s small businesses with my friends.
MAGAW’S OF BOSTON

Artists Bill and Jeanne Magaw’s quaint small farm and working studio is dotted with playful, peaceful metal sculptures and “wind machines” which are made with their own hands. Their art is totally captivating. It excites the eye and stimulates the senses. The couple welcomes you to their farm to share their creative artwork, which is available for purchase. The Magaws are internationally known and their kinetic sculptures have found their way into gardens, galleries and public places throughout the world.

The first high school orchestra in the nation was in Richmond. Today, national and international musical performances are offered at the Civic Hall Performing Arts Center and Earlham College. The Richmond Symphony Orchestra, with origins since 1908, is one of the smallest U.S. communities to have a professional symphony orchestra.

Blues music is showcased at the Firehouse BBQ & Blues on weekends, recalls Richmond’s recording history. The revitalized area of Richmond’s Historic Depot District has become the “in” place to be, encompassing restaurants, a coffee bar, an ice cream parlor, shoppes, and the Model T Museum. Additional early cars that were manufactured in Richmond are at the Wayne County Historical Museum. The museum is a unique repository of local history from early pioneer life into modern times with items ranging from a Conestoga wagon to a doll house. There’s even a mummy, brought from Egypt by museums founder Julia Meek Gaar, who traveled extensively around the world and brought her findings home where they are exhibited. A second mummy is in the free Joseph Moore Museum of Natural History at Earlham College. Here are skeletons of a mastodon, giant beaver, interactive stations for youngsters, a planetarium, an extremely popular exhibit that includes live reptiles are among the museums offerings. Wayne County’s first fairy home appeared at the Joseph Moore Museum in 2012. Now more than 40 fairy sites are available, sometimes in hidden spots, on the Enchanted Fairy Trail.

With two world-class environmental centers and a variety of trails, Wayne County’s mantra could well be “take a hike.” Meant in the most positive way, for a profusion of physical, mental and spiritual reasons.

With 466 acres, Hayes Arboretum offers hiking trails, ponds, fields, wetlands and an Indian Mound. It has three percent of the state’s old growth forest plus acres of reforested land. Four generations of the Hayes family have worked this land, carrying on Stanley Hayes’ commitment to not only preserve and protect nature but also share it with the public through recreation and education, having the foresight to guarantee its future by creating a foundation in 1959.

“Native trees and reforestation—that was his passion, his hobby,” says great-grandson Steve Hayes Jr. “He wanted more people to have his love of reforestation.”

For this arboretum, native plant material from the Whitewater River Valley, a long educational history, and environmental stewardship. “People come here to learn—we’re definitely an educational facility—and to experience nature. We’re as much a part about the indoors as we are the outdoors,” Hayes says.

In April 1963 the land was opened to the public; more than 1,000 cars were lined up to get in. Admission was free then; it’s still free now.

“The No. 1 thing people like about the Arboretum is the hiking trails,” Hayes says. “Come run through the woods. Bring your dog.”

There are 16 miles of trails, mountain bike trails, a 3-mile auto tour, guided hikes that include a meditation hike, a Native American history hike, children’s outdoor playscape, butterfly garden, nature center, and history museum. Education is big, with classes and day camps for pre-schoolers through adults. Woodcarving is popular; beginners start by carving a bar of soap.

The main entrance is open 9 a.m. -5 p.m. Tuesday-Saturday but the East Side Trails entrance is open dawn to dusk every day.

The Cope Environmental Center, just west of Richmond, was established in 1992 when educators Jim and Helen Cope transformed their farm into a nature center with botanist, arborist, and conservationist Francis Park.

Program Coordinator Stephanie McCurdy says “Cope Environmental Center is full of opportunities for visitors of all ages to interact with nature.”

People visit primarily for the nature programs. “We encourage people to be active in nature—to touch, smell, even taste—the great outdoors to awaken and discover their sense of wonder,” McCurdy explains. “When the natural world gives a benefit, and people are having fun with it, they learn to care for

Long before woolly mammoths roamed the frozen plains, long before dinosaurs existed, Indiana was covered by a shallow sea flourishing with life. The fossils found in the area give us some idea of what life was like 445 million years ago. Fossils of snails, corals, trilobites, bivalves, brachiopods, bryozoans, and others can be found among rock formations, along stream banks of the Whitewater Gorge Trail, or any place where nature and time have eroded them from the surrounding rock.

We have 3 miles of hiking trails through habitats, prairies, and wetlands, an abundance of wildlife to be seen, and a natural playscape for the little ones to explore.” Kids love the wetlands because ‘they can go into the water to catch frogs.’

Cope’s education building is a “living building” made from mostly local, sustainable, toxin-free and energy efficient materials. McCurdy states “it is an honor to continue to share the Cope Family’s mission of conservation, education, research to promote sustainability. We invite people to visit and discover what Cope Environmental Center is all about.”

As at Hayes Arboretum, admission to the trails at Cope is free.

The American Discovery Trail, with 6,800 miles of multi-use trail stretching from Delaware to California, goes through Wayne County. One of its local trails is the Cardinal.

Greenway, Indiana’s longest rail-to-trail covering 62 miles from Richmond to Marion. It goes through Whitewater Gorge Park as the Whitewater Gorge Trail. In addition to part of the city, this urban trail passes local geology and history, taking in Thistletwaite Falls, the Starr-Gennett Logo building and Gennett Records studio site and Musicians’ Walk of Fame.

County and city parks offer additional trails in Glen Miller Park, Springwood Park, and Middlefork Reservoir. Earlham College and I.U. East invite walkers to their campuses.
DISC GOLF

You have to admit, the sweetest sound while playing a round of disc golf is the sound the chains make when the disc hits them and lands in the basket. What are you waiting for? Get out and play a challenging game at one of Richmond’s two courses.

Middlefork Reservoir

downtown Richmond, the Historic Depot District and the Cardinal Greenway. FREE bike rentals are available at Cycling and Fitness Warehouse in Richmond.

The area offers golf, birding, and gardens. Try disc golf, or pickleball. Be a spectator at the Richmond Jazz Baseball, a Collegiate Summer Baseball League played at the Historic McBride Stadium.

On Saturday nights in August, Richmond Parks and Recreation invites film buffs to “Movies in the Glen” at Glen Miller Park. In the fall, pick apples at Dougherty Orchards, the oldest family owned apple orchard in the state.

There’s more, and the Wayne County Convention and Tourism Bureau has got it covered. Check it out for Recreation’s 3 R’s—you know, refreshment, relaxation, and rejuvenation.

THE PEOPLE BEHIND WAYNE COUNTY

Stephen Hayes, Jr., Executive Director

Although Stephen has only lived in Wayne County since 2010, he’s been visiting the area his entire life. Originally from the east coast, Stephen was surprised—and delighted—by all of Wayne County’s green space and the opportunities for the public to experience nature. At the Arboretum, visitors can hike, mountain bike, or do an auto driving tour; and can enjoy the new nature playscape, nature center, and educational classes.

Q&A

What do you think makes Wayne County so special?

Environmental passion. Our community is amazing environmentally friendly and the community works hard to preserve it for future generations.

What do you think Wayne County’s biggest draws are for tourists?

We are a convenient destination for tourists. Once they start exploring, they’ll find a variety of things to see and do. And, locals are always willing to share what they think are the best and most unique places to explore and experience.

What is your favorite way to spend a day off?

I enjoy working on my 1966 Ford Thunderbird, which hopefully will be ready to drive around the county soon. My favorite drives are U.S. 227 south from Richmond, and Waterfall Road which takes you to Thistlethwaite Falls.

Breakfast, lunch, dinner, afternoon bite, late-night snack—there’s a place to find it all in Wayne County.

Breakfast begins early at Aj’s Main Street Diner on U.S. 40 in Richmond. This retro diner has 14 stools at the counter and five booths, all generally filled each morning with locals—and visitors who ask where the locals eat. Freshly roasted craft coffees are available at Roscoe’s Coffee Bar and Tap Room located in the Historic Depot District and Roscoe’s East on U.S. 40. From early morning to late night, there are sandwiches, wraps,
For chocolate lovers, there’s no better way to see Wayne County than through the tantalizing tastes and smells of locally-made chocolate delights. This sweet trail is free ... yes, we said free, and is available year-round. Your journey begins at the Welcome Center where you’ll pick up your official chocolate passport. With about a dozen stops, the self-guided trail leads you to a historic candy factory, ice parlors, unique gift shops, Amish market and wineries. If you’re craving a sweet adventure, this delectable trail is for you.

Little Sheba’s opened as a sandwich shop in 1990. Since then it’s grown into a restaurant & bar. The Sheba burger is the No. 1 seller; also popular are Italian subs, Greek pizza and Reubens. Altogether, more than 40 custom sandwiches.

On the next block, where Firehouse No. 1 was built in 1860, there’s Firehouse BBQ & Blues. Fireman owner Tom Broyles loved the old building. He’d always been interested in barbecue and appreciates Richmond’s rich music history. So in 2012, his passions merged with the opening of Firehouse BBQ & Blues. The restaurant honors its firefighter past with murals, patches from fire stations throughout the country, and even a fireman’s pole. Additional murals focus on Richmond’s strong music history, and tabletops present quotes from the music greats. Entrees focus on hickory smoked meats—and that jarro’ bacon. On Friday and Saturday nights there’s live music.

The classy/casual Cordial Cork Restaurant and Wine Bar began by offering wines by owner soups, salads and pastries as well as craft beer and wine.

The Tin Lizzie Café is a quaint, cozy eatery located downtown Richmond serving home-style favorites for both breakfast and lunch.

Cinnamon Spice Bakery, on the west edge of Centerville, is a quick breakfast stop for coffee and doughnuts—unless the inviting atmosphere compels a respite at one of the small tables.

In Cambridge City, Lumpy’s Café’s signature dish is their giant hand-breaded tenderloin sandwich that’s crisp on the outside and juicy on the inside. Just down the street, is King’s Café where you’ll find made-from-scratch cinnamon rolls, and a variety of desserts. Sandwiches, soups and salads are made fresh for the lunch crowd.
Adam Melton and desserts by Lisa Cakes, but diners wanted more. So, chef Charles Henderson started preparing an array of fresh fare. His lollipop chicken is a hit, as are his loaded brisket nachos and salmon capellini. An extensive selection of fine wines is available by the glass or flight. Brunch is offered on weekends. Additional wines and spirits are available at New Boswell Brewery & Tap Room in the Depot District and at Dougherty Orchard in Cambridge City.

Legends Southside Bar & Grill was established more than a century ago and is Wayne County’s oldest tavern. The pub at South 5th and D streets became the neighborhood gathering spot along the lines of “Cheers.” The Legend burger is its No. 1 seller, with the roast beef sandwich coming in at No. 2 and the Penguin—that is, the Legend’s tenderloin—at No. 3.

Cambridge City’s No. 9 Grill is a popular spot for lunch and dinner and boasts of fresh-cut steaks, juicy burgers, pastas and salads.

Chef Galo Molina, Executive Chef
Chef Molina left his native Ecuador at age 17, in pursuit of hard work that would eventually provide culinary training in Bermuda, England, Paris, and several prestigious restaurants on the East Coast. When he decided to open his own restaurant, he was looking for a “special place” and found that in Wayne County, which, he says, is “a community of caring people.” He and his wife, Linda, opened their first restaurant, The Old Richmond Inn, in 1986 in a grand old home in downtown Richmond. They’ve since added three more, including Galo’s Italian Grill, which he says is “always fresh, always Italian.”

Q&A
What do you think makes Wayne County so special?
We have a strong community effort to create and maintain a higher quality of life. We also have fantastic parks, and are easily accessible from a major interstate and highway.

What do you think Wayne County’s biggest draws are for tourists?
A wonderful culinary scene, of course. There’s such a variety of things to see and do, and usually a special event or something fun going on every weekend.

What is your favorite way to spend a day off?
We have so many nice, local golf courses in the area, so I play golf when I can. I enjoy working in our garden which, in season, provides many of the fresh vegetables and herbs for our restaurants.
Their fried pickles are a crowd pleaser. Since 1984, the Old Richmond Inn has been the heart and soul of fine and casual dining. Timeless classics, dishes with international influences, and decadent desserts are created by chef/owner Galo Molina. All entrees are crafted with the finest and freshest ingredients available. Other Richmond options owned by the Molinas offer different experiences—“always fresh, always Italian” at Galo’s Italian Grill, or nautically-themed atmosphere at Ainsley’s Café & Harbor Bar, and 5th Street Coffee and Bagels where all the restaurants’ breads are made.

On U.S. 27—the Quaker Trace—Fountain Acres Amish Market has samples aplenty: homemade ice cream, cheeses, salads, even items in small sample cups on refrigerated shelves. You’ll want to take some cash. They don’t accept credit cards.

In Hagerstown, the place to stop is Abbott’s Candies. And the candy to get is caramels. Crafted the old-fashioned way—small batches, hand cut, hand wrapped, hand packaged. And while the huge copper cooking pot is stirred continually by a hand-made paddle that’s been mechanized, its molten treasure is still poured by two workers.

Claim a table at Willie & Reds for a bountiful meal. The incredible smorgasbord full of homestyle favorites is what keeps people coming back. Menu dining is also available for those seeking a lighter meal.

While in Hagerstown, get your favorite coffee or frappe at 1896 Lounge Café. You’ll want to relax a while to soak up the alluring and cozy atmosphere.

A mid-day treat—ice cream, perhaps—is available at Ullery’s Homemade Ice Cream Parlor with 12 tantalizing flavors. Seasonal flavors are a real treat. Muddy Monkey is a self-serve frozen dessert shop with 21 flavors to choose from.

During the summer, don’t miss out on Food Truck Wednesday at Richmond’s Elstro Plaza from 11-2. Lots of tasty choices!

History, shopping, outdoor adventures, art, Just Us Girls getaway ...
Wayne County’s reasons to visit are plentiful, so when it’s time for a getaway, we’re ready for you. Comfortable settings and friendly hospitality await.

Our area is unique, and so are our visitors! We understand travelers have their own preference of accommodation types, so we make sure to have something for everyone. Some prefer the intimacy and coziness of a bed and breakfast, and we have several to choose from. Plus, who doesn’t like to start their day with a home-cooked breakfast?
Want to sleep under the stars and enjoy cooking over an open campfire? Many travelers arrive in their recreation vehicles, or with camp gear in tow. We have plenty of campgrounds with full RV hookups, primitive campsites, and rustic camping cabins.

Whether it’s within walking distance to antique shops or located in the country where you can enjoy bird watching from the dining room window, unique accommodations are sprinkled throughout the county... whether it’s a private guest suite, loft, or an entire cottage!

Along with a great selection of locally-owned accommodations, you’ll find national lodging chains featuring inviting guest rooms and suites, and extended stay options offering a variety of comfortable amenities.

To enhance your visit, be sure to check out our website at VisitRichmond.org for a listing of special getaway packages—Just Us Girls, Romance, Chocolate and much more.
